

INTO THE WOOD

A film installation by

SEAN ROGG

21 January - 26 February 2006

Noon to 10.30pm Monday - Saturday and noon - 5.30pm Sunday

In certain parts of rural Sweden an old traditional law still stands. If a child under the age of 18 commits a serious offence and is convicted of the crime, he or she is not sent to a correctional facility. Instead, state firemen show up at the child's home and ceremonially burn the house to the ground.

It is hoped that by being made an example of, other parents will keep control of their children's behaviour. The system seems to work as a house is only burned once every 12 to 15 years.

Sean Rogg happened upon one of these burnings. His extraordinary film, INTO THE WOOD, records it.

Sean's work has recently been seen at the Bloomberg Space and Modern Art Oxford. In the last five years, he has made many films for The Wapping Project, including his major film installation, Where's The Beef?.
